Closing the OW US vs Eurozone trade

- Eurozone had a big rebound vs the US around a year ago, of 30%+ in USD terms - see top chart, driven by our view at the time of easing in gas prices on ample supply, among other. We have cut Eurozone to UW vs the US in early May of 2023, and had a preference for the US since. We are now closing the US over Eurozone OW, for the following reasons:
 1. As per top chart, Eurozone has lagged in the past few quarters, losing 14% relative since May, and had relative outflows - in 41 out of the past 52 wks, and in 7 out of the past 10 wks ytd. At 13.3x forward, it is trading cheap vs the US, which is now on 21x. Even if one were to look at sector neutral P/E rating of Eurozone vs the US, it is trading the cheapest vs any time pre COVID. In absolute terms, Eurozone valuations are fair value vs historical median of 13x PE, and fair value vs fixed income. On both counts, US is more stretched.
 2. We had a preference for Growth over Value style through 2023 and again this year. Even as we stay with this tilt, we note that Growth style has already performed exceptionally well, it is trading stretched and is at risk of a reversal, given the MOMO concentration. Of course, within Europe there is also an increasing risk of MOMO unwind, but the magnitude of the potential impact would always be greater for the US market.
 3. In terms of activity momentum, Eurozone had a clear weakening through last year and especially relative to the US - see bottom chart. Even as we are skeptical with respect to the size and duration of the potential rebound, the relative growth disappointments of the region might have peaked, as seen in improving relative CESIs.
 4. While ECB typically takes its cue from the Fed, there is a chance that it moves ahead of the US this time around.
 5. We have been cautious on China over the past year from a global allocation perspective, but have a tactically more positive China call, and if this continues tracking, it could indirectly help Eurozone.
- We are neutralizing the US vs Eurozone preference, but not reversing. This is because the potential for a market drawdown is elevated, in our view, with Goldilocks fully in the price. The risks are on both sides of this narrow path: either to growth disappointing, as seen in latest IFO, ISM, retail sales and US small business confidence, and also from inflation potentially staying too hot, as seen in the US 1-year inflation swaps approaching October highs. In addition, the earnings of Growth style keep beating Value, and US earnings likewise are so far delivering better vs Eurozone. Finally, US politics could potentially turn into a headwind for international markets later on in the year. If markets weaken from here, Eurozone is very unlikely to outperform, but equally the much more attractive P/E multiples in the region relative to clearly stretched US P/E multiples could offer some cushion, at least in relative terms.
- What is attractive in Euro Area? We note that every single Eurozone level 1 sector is trading at a greater than historical discount vs the US.

Closing the OW US vs Eurozone trade

Post the strong start to '23, Eurozone equities have lagged the US since May

Source: Datastream

We held an upbeat view on Eurozone equities since Q4 '22, before downgrading the region to outright Underweight in our regional portfolio in May of last year. Our bullish view on Eurozone at the time was driven by the call that gas prices were set to fall, by China reopening, and by what was the extremely cautious positioning on the region at the end of 2022. We downgraded Eurozone in May '23, on the back of the view that activity momentum was set to weaken, with Eurozone equities underperforming US by 14% in dollar terms since.

We are now closing the US vs Eurozone preference: 1) Eurozone has lagged, it saw outflows, and is attractively priced vs the US

Source: EPFR

Apart from the renewed underperformance in the past few quarters, Eurozone equities have seen meaningful outflows, which contrasts to the US inflows.

Source: EPFR

In the past 52 weeks, Eurozone saw outflows for 41 weeks, and ytd it saw 7 out of 10 weeks of outflows.

Source: Datastream

In terms of valuations, Eurozone equities are trading at a discount of almost 40% versus the US, a greater than 20% discount seen in the past.

Source: Datastream

Even adjusted for sector biases, Eurozone screens attractive. On sector neutral P/E, it is trading at one of the cheapest P/E relatives seen in pre-COVID times.

Source: Datastream

In absolute terms, Eurozone 12m Fwd P/E at 13.3x is broadly in line with its long-term history.

Table 1: DM Yield Gap for key regions

	Dividend yield	10Y Bond yield	Dividend yield minus bond yield	Average since '00	Current vs Average (bp)
US	1.4%	4.3%	-2.9%	-1.4%	-152
Japan	2.0%	0.8%	1.2%	0.9%	30
Eurozone	3.1%	2.9%	0.1%	0.4%	-29
UK	3.9%	4.1%	-0.1%	0.6%	-72

Source: IBES, Bloomberg Finance L.P., J.P.Morgan

Relative to the bond yields, Eurozone is not far from fair value. The US, in contrast, is outright expensive, in our view. At 3.1%, Eurozone dividend yield is meaningfully above the US.

Source: Bloomberg Finance L.P.

In addition, we note that the buyback yield in Europe is now not very different from the US. Adding dividend yield to buybacks, European total yield is at present meaningfully higher than in the US.

Italy	9.0	13.2	-31%

US equities look stretched in a historical context on P/E metrics, while Eurozone is not.

2) We favoured Growth vs Value style, but the risk of a reversal is increasing

Figure 8: MSCI US and Europe Growth vs Value

Source: Datastream

We held a preference for Growth over Value style in 2023, and again ytd.

Source: Bloomberg Finance L.P.

We fundamentally stay with the Growth over Value preference, but note the risk of a reversal is increasing, as the momentum trade has been very strong. The long momentum basket is outperforming the short leg by over 11% in the US, by 8.4% Eurozone, and by 8.9% in Japan.

Source: Datastream

The market concentration is becoming very unhealthy, and could unwind.

Source: Datastream

Concentration risk is high in Eurozone as well. A reversal in momentum factor performance, and a potential unwind in concentration, could be a problem for the Eurozone as well, but on a relative basis US equities will likely see a greater negative impact.

3) Relative growth momentum for Eurozone is starting to improve

Source: Bloomberg Finance L.P.

The US economy enjoyed much stronger growth over the last year, while Eurozone growth projections were consistently downgraded.

Source: J.P. Morgan, Bloomberg Finance L.P., Datastream

This supported the better showing of US vs Eurozone earnings.

Source: Bloomberg Finance L.P.

The rebound in Eurozone CESIs at the start of last year helped the equity market outperformance, while the weakness post May has been a drag. We note that Eurozone CESI appears to be moving above the US again.

4) There is a chance that ECB starts easing ahead of the Fed

Figure 15: ECB and Fed policy rate

Source: Bloomberg Finance L.P.

Typically, the ECB policy decisions would follow the Fed lead. That could change this time around.

Source: Bloomberg Finance L.P.

Relative to the peak dovishness point in early January, where the Fed was projected to ease by more than the ECB this year, now the ECB is expected to act more aggressively.

5) Any recovery in China could indirectly help Eurozone

Source: Datastream

Eurozone is more leveraged to China than is the US, and this has contributed to Eurozone's weaker showing relative to the US. China could trade better in the near term given its nearly 40% underperformance and very light positioning. Our China strategists have a constructive view on the market. The key arguments they highlight in favour of China equities are the budget deficit having surprised to the upside, the Rmb 1trn special CGB scheme, and the lifting of the debt ceiling program.

China macro data has been disappointing over the past year, but could start to stabilize. PMI indicators are broadly back above the 50- pt threshold.

Source: Datastream

MSCI China screens attractive at 9x forward P/E, trading record cheap vs MSCI World. The longer-term issue is whether the current tactical bounce could turn into sustained outperformance, which we have reservations over.

Why not go OW Eurozone vs the US?

We are neutralizing the Eurozone vs US trade, but we are not recommending to go outright OW Eurozone vs the US. The reason for this is because the risk of a broader market draw-down is elevated, in our view.

The Goldilocks narrative is fully consensus at present, with complacency with respect to the economic outlook among investors. Implied recession odds are at record lows, which might be too optimistic.

Given the above, equity markets could have a drawdown over the next months both because of growth disappointments, and also due to continued sticky inflation prints and higher for longer Fed; ie, we might end up with the opposite from Goldilocks.

As we approach the US elections in November of this year, a potential trade war uncertainty could weigh on markets generally and on International in particular.

Growth factor performance has thus far been supported by the strong earnings momentum, which has benefitted US over Europe trade. While we see the risks of this changing, especially given that the US large cap earnings could turn to be more cyclical than structural, so far the turn has not arrived. The improvement on any of the above would be a next step for us in considering to going outright OW Eurozone vs the US.

Equity Strategy Key Calls and Drivers

So far this year, US and Japan are ahead of other markets, Growth is outperforming Value and large caps are again beating small in all key regions. We continue to believe that this, ultimately unhealthy, high concentration and narrow leadership is set to stay for a while longer. To buy Value and International stocks one needs to see a reflationary backdrop, in our view, but we could have the opposite. In terms of bond yields, we argued last October to go long duration, but also in January to look for a tactical bounce back in bond yields, as Fed easing became overdiscounted in markets. We now think that the counter-rally in yields might be running out of steam, and would advocate to go long duration again. The move back higher in Fed futures might be getting done – they round-tripped back to October levels, and activity momentum could soften from here. The question is, why didn't equities weaken as US 10-year yields backed up 50bp during Jan-Feb? We think that this is because investors assumed that the yield upmove is reflective of economic acceleration, but we note that earnings projections for 2024 are not reacting positively – they keep coming down in most sectors. If the growth acceleration does not come through, this could act as a headwind. We close UW Eurozone vs US trade, as relative growth disappointments for the region are likely at their peak and growth style in US is at a risk of a reversal given it is already so stretched.

Table 8: J.P. Morgan Equity Strategy — Factors driving our medium-term views

Driver	Impact	Our Core Working Assumptions	Recent Developments
Global Growth	Neutral	At risk of weakening as consumer strength wanes	Global composite PMI is at 52.1
European Growth	Negative	Manufacturing and services are converging on the downside; industry data stays weak
Monetary Policy	Neutral	Fed pivot could be accompanied by activity weakness
Currency	Neutral	USD could strengthen again
Earnings	Negative	Corporate pricing power is likely to weaken from here	2024 EPS projections are continuing their downtrend
Valuations	Negative	At 21x, US forward P/E is still stretched, especially vs real yield	MSCI Europe on 13.8x Fwd P/E
Technicals	Negative	Sentiment and positioning are stretched post the Nov-Dec rally	RSIs are in overbought territory

Sector	Recommendations	Key Drivers
Healthcare	Overweight	Potential for lower yields and stronger dollar remain near term support, earnings are also holding up
Staples	Overweight	Sector is one of the best performers around the last Fed hike in the cycle, lower bond yields and better relative EPS momentum should further support
Banks	Underweight	Downgraded to UW in October after 3 years of strong performance. Bond yields and PMIs direction is the key for the potential P/E re-rating of the sector, we think both will move lower
Chemicals	Underweight	The sector trades at 70% premium to the market, well above historical norm. pricing continues to deteriorate, downside risks to current earnings and margin projections

US	Neutral	Expensive, with earnings risk. Growth style at a risk of reversal.
Japan	Overweight	Japan is attractively priced; diverging policy path and TSE reforms are tailwinds

UK	Overweight	Valuations still look very attractive, low beta with the highest regional dividend yield

Important Disclosures

Company-Specific Disclosures: Important disclosures, including price charts and credit opinion history tables, are available for compendium reports and all J.P. Morgan–covered companies, and certain non-covered companies, by visiting <https://www.jpmm.com/research/disclosures>, calling 1-800-477-0406, or e-mailing research.disclosure.inquiries@jpmorgan.com with your request.

Explanation of Equity Research Ratings, Designations and Analyst(s) Coverage Universe:

J.P. Morgan uses the following rating system: Overweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will outperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst’s, or the Research Analyst’s team’s, coverage universe); Neutral (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will perform in line with the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst’s, or the Research Analyst’s team’s, coverage universe); and Underweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst’s, or the Research Analyst’s team’s, coverage universe. NR is Not Rated. In this case, J.P. Morgan has removed the rating and, if applicable, the price target, for this stock because of either a lack of a sufficient fundamental basis or for legal, regulatory or policy reasons. The previous rating and, if applicable, the price target, no longer should be relied upon. An NR designation is not a recommendation or a rating. In our Asia (ex-Australia and ex-India) and U.K. small- and mid-cap Equity Research, each stock’s expected total return is compared to the expected total return of a benchmark country market index, not to those Research Analysts’ coverage universe. If it does not appear in the Important Disclosures section of this report, the certifying Research Analyst’s coverage universe can be found on J.P. Morgan’s Research website, <https://www.jpmm.com>.
